WHAT IS IT?

Every year people send us lilac blossoms asking us to identify them. The answer is, we can't; and for several reasons: (1) Only the most expert and elaborate packing arrangements, plus air mail, will get the bloom to us in good condition. In all the years, we've had only one bloom that reached us in really good shape. Most of them are wilted, discolored and often completely dried up. (2) There are some 800 lilacs that have been named. In our permanent collection there are about 150 species and varieties. Your plant could very well be one of the other 650. (3) Bloom would have to reach us at our nursery in Goodrich at the height of bloom there or no proper comparison could be made. Blooming dates vary widely throughout the U.S. You just can't win!
